In 1854, the Crimean War broke out. Clara was deeply moved by the suffering of the soldiers, and she traveled to Europe to volunteer as a nurse. She worked tirelessly to care for the wounded and dying, and her compassion and determination earned her the respect of both soldiers and civilians.

After the war, Clara returned to the United States and continued to work to help others. She founded the American Red Cross in 1881, and she served as its president for 23 years. Under Clara's leadership, the Red Cross became a global organization that provides aid to people in need around the world.

Clara Barton was a pioneer in the field of nursing and humanitarian aid. She was a courageous and determined woman who dedicated her life to making the world a better place. Her story is an inspiration to us all.
