The Stone Age

The Stone Age is the earliest period of human history, and it is characterized by the use of stone tools. The Stone Age is divided into three periods: the Paleolithic, the Mesolithic, and the Neolithic. The Paleolithic is the oldest period of the Stone Age, and it is characterized by the use of simple stone tools. The Mesolithic is the middle period of the Stone Age, and it is characterized by the use of more sophisticated stone tools. The Neolithic is the newest period of the Stone Age, and it is characterized by the use of polished stone tools and the development of agriculture.

The Bronze Age

The Bronze Age is the period of history that follows the Stone Age. The Bronze Age is characterized by the use of bronze, which is an alloy of copper and tin. The Bronze Age is divided into three periods: the Early Bronze Age, the Middle Bronze Age, and the Late Bronze Age. The Early Bronze Age is the oldest period of the Bronze Age, and it is characterized by the use of simple bronze tools. The Middle Bronze Age is the middle period of the Bronze Age, and it is characterized by the use of more sophisticated bronze tools. The Late Bronze Age is the newest period of the Bronze Age, and it is characterized by the use of bronze weapons and the development of social hierarchy.

The Iron Age

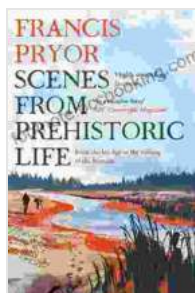

The Iron Age is the period of history that follows the Bronze Age. The Iron Age is characterized by the use of iron, which is a harder and more durable metal than bronze. The Iron Age is divided into two periods: the Early Iron Age and the Late Iron Age. The Early Iron Age is the oldest period of the Iron Age, and it is characterized by the use of simple iron tools. The Late Iron Age is the newest period of the Iron Age, and it is characterized by the use of more sophisticated iron tools and the development of urban centers.

The Coming of the Romans

The Romans arrived in Britain in 43 AD, and they remained there for over 400 years. The Romans had a major impact on British society, and they introduced many new technologies and ideas. The Romans also built roads, towns, and forts, and they established a system of government. The Roman period came to an end in 410 AD, when the Romans withdrew from Britain.

From The Ice Age To The Coming Of The Romans is a fascinating and informative book that provides a comprehensive overview of Britain's prehistoric past. This book is a valuable resource for anyone who is interested in learning more about this period of history.
