This comprehensive guide will provide you with everything you need to know about attracting college athletic scholarships, from choosing the right sports to building a strong academic and athletic resume.

Step 1: Choose the Right Sport

The first step to attracting college athletic scholarships is to choose the right sport. Not all sports are created equal when it comes to scholarships, and some sports are simply more competitive than others.

If you're serious about earning a college athletic scholarship, you should focus on a sport that is:

- Popular and well-funded
- Competitive at the college level
- A good fit for your skills and abilities

Some of the most popular and well-funded college sports include:

- Football
- Basketball
- Baseball
- Softball
- Soccer
- Volleyball
- Track and field
- Swimming and diving
- Golf
- Tennis

Step 2: Build a Strong Academic Resume

In addition to athletic ability, college coaches also look for athletes with strong academic records. A good GPA and test scores will show coaches that you are a serious student who is committed to your education.

Here are some tips for building a strong academic resume:

- Take challenging courses in high school.
- Earn good grades in all of your classes.
- Score well on the SAT or ACT.
- Take the NCAA Eligibility Center's Initial-Eligibility Clearinghouse.

Step 3: Build a Strong Athletic Resume

Of course, athletic ability is also a key factor in attracting college athletic scholarships. Coaches want to see that you have the skills and potential to compete at the college level.

Here are some tips for building a strong athletic resume:

- Play on a competitive travel team.
- Attend college recruiting camps and showcases.
- Get good coaching and training.
- Work hard and improve your skills.
- Be a team player and leader.

Step 4: Contact College Coaches

Once you have a strong academic and athletic resume, it's time to start contacting college coaches. The best way to do this is through email or snail mail. In your email or letter, be sure to include the following information:

- Your name and contact information
- Your high school and graduation year
- The sport you play and your position
- Your academic and athletic achievements
- Why you are interested in the coach's program

Be persistent and don't give up if you don't hear back from a coach right away. It may take some time to get your foot in the door, but if you stay persistent, you will eventually get the attention of a college coach.

Step 5: Attend College Visits

If you are fortunate enough to get a response from a college coach, the next step is to attend a college visit. This is a great opportunity to meet the coach in person, see the campus, and get a feel for the program.

When you are on your college visit, be sure to ask the coach any questions you have about the program. You should also be prepared to talk about your academic and athletic goals.

Step 6: Apply for Scholarships
