

Repealing Big Government Before The Coming Fiscal Collapse

The coming fiscal collapse is a serious threat to our nation's future. The government is spending more money than it takes in, and the debt is growing out of control. If we do not take action, we will face a fiscal crisis that will make the Great Depression look like a walk in the park.

The good news is that we can still avoid this crisis. But we need to act now. We need to repeal big government and reduce the size and scope of the federal government.

What is Big Government?

Big government is a term used to describe a government that is large and powerful. Big governments typically have a lot of control over the economy and the lives of its citizens.

There are many different ways to measure the size of government. One common measure is the percentage of GDP that is spent by the government. In the United States, the government spends about 40% of GDP. This is a much higher percentage than in most other developed countries.

Another way to measure the size of government is by the number of employees. In the United States, the federal government employs over 2 million people. This does not include the millions of people who work for state and local governments.

Big governments have a number of negative consequences. They are typically more expensive, less efficient, and less responsive to the needs of the people.

Why We Need to Repeal Big Government

There are many reasons why we need to repeal big government. Here are just a few:

- Big government is expensive. The government spends trillions of dollars every year, and most of this money is wasted. We need to repeal big government to save money and reduce the tax burden on the American people.
- Big government is inefficient. The government is a slow and bureaucratic organization. It takes forever to get anything done, and the results are often not worth the wait. We need to repeal big government to make the government more efficient and responsive to the needs of the people.

- Big government is oppressive. The government has too much power over the lives of its citizens. It tells us what we can and cannot do, and it taxes us to death. We need to repeal big government to give people more freedom and control over their own lives.

How to Repeal Big Government

There are many ways to repeal big government. Here are a few:

- Reduce the size of government. We can reduce the size of government by cutting spending and eliminating unnecessary programs.
- Privatize government functions. We can privatize government functions to make them more efficient and responsive to the needs of the people.
- Deregulate the economy. We can deregulate the economy to give businesses more freedom and allow them to create jobs.

Repealing big government is essential for the future of our nation. We need to reduce the size and scope of the federal government to make it more efficient, less expensive, and less oppressive. By repealing big government, we can save money, create jobs, and give people more freedom and control over their own lives.
